BURGLAR POSED AS A COP.

MRS. WINERURGH MET HIM AS HE WAS QUITTING HER HOUSE.

Me Said He Had Been Called In to Look for a Thief, and Escaped with a Lot of MUverware Which Me Had Tested with an Acid - Another Harlem Robbery, Mr. and Mrs. M. Wineburgh of 25 West Seventy-sixth street had been in fear of a visit from burglars for some time before the residence of one of their neighbors was entered and obbed, four or five weeks ago. They took that as a warning and locked all their sliverware in a small closet on the second floor. The Wineburgh residence is a handsome white stone se, and one that a burgiar would naturally select as a place likely to repay his labora There have been several small burglaries in the neighborhood recently, but Mr. and Mrs. Wine mrgn have not lost any sleep because of these, They felt certain that the family eliver, their most valued possession, would escape any bur-glar who might intrude.

On Sunday night a party of friends visited Mr. and Mrs. Wineburgh, and the silverware was brought down from its hiding place. It was left on the sideboard over night. Yesterday morning when Mrs. Wineburgh awoke she said to her husband, "I'll bet that silver is gone; ' and she ran down stairs to see. The silver was still on the sideboard, however, and it was left there for the servants to scour when Mrs. Wineburgh went out to do some shopping yesterday morning.

Mrs. Wineburgh was absent about an hour. and when she returned the door was opened for her by a large, rather rough-looking man. Mrs. Wineburgh was startled. "Who are you do-turn here?" she said, "What are you do-

"Who are you?" she said, "What are you using here?"
Oh, I'm a policeman," answered the man;
"the servant girl called me in because she thought a burglar was in the house, but I couldn't find anything."
"You stay here a minute," said Mrs. Wineburgh, who was suspicious of the alleged policeman, "and I'll see about it."
"Can't wait," said the man, "got to get back on post."

The man brushed past Mrs. Wineburgh and ran along Seventy-sixth street toward Central Park. Before Mrs. Wineburgh could get into the hall two servant maids appeared, waving their arms and shouting, "Thieves!" "Burg-lars!" "The silver's gone".

the hall two servant maids appeared waving their arms and shouting. "Thieves!" "Burglars!" "The silver's gone!"

The silver was indeed gone, and all that remained of the carefully guarded stock was a number of plated knives and forks. The burglar had evidently been more fastidious than some members of his craft, for he had tested the silverware with acid, and had taken only the solid wars. The part taken included knives, spoons, forks, and a part of a silver service, and was reported to the police, but they had not caught the burglar late last night. Dr. George Knickerbocker of 145 West 128th street lost fewelry valued at $500 at the hands of sneak thieves on Saturday afternoon, and is not depending entirely upon the police to recover them. On the contrary, he offers a reward for the return of pawn tickets representing the lost

A young man, tall, slender, and well dressed, found the servant alone in the house at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. He suggested swating the Doctor's return, and the servant gave him a chair. Ten minutes later, while she was at work in the kitchen, she heard the front foor close, and, going up stairs, found that the stranger had gone away.

Little was thought of his visit until nearly 11 o'clock, when Mrs. Knickerbocker, preparing to to bed, discovered that her bureau had been fifled. A jewel case containing a turquoise ring, a diamond ring and two seal rings, a gold watch, live gold scarf pins, three pairs of cuff buttons, locket and chain, two bar pins, and a pair of sarrings, had been taken.

HUDSON COUNTY NUISANCES.

Three of Them Severely Second by the Grand Jury - Clifford Indicted.

The Hudson county, N. J., Grand Jury handed up several indictments and three presentments the court yesterday evening. Justice Lippincott, who had been in attendance all day at the Court of Errors and Appeals in Trenton, did not arrive at the Court House in Jersey City until 6:30 o'clock. The only important indic ment was that against Detective Edward Clif-William E. Wattson of the West Shore Hall-

One of the presentments called the attention of the court to the manner in which the North Hudson County Railway Company runs its cars during the busy hours. The presentment says "There exists in connection with the running of the trolley cars on the lines of the North Hudson County Railroad evils and abuses which call for a remedial application of some sort. It is a matter of common knowledge and universal complaint by those compelled to use the cars of the Union Hill division of the North Hudson County's line that they are crammed and lammed into the cars by the attendants of that company at the Hoboken Ferry in such abnormal numbers that all principles of comfort, defeelings and sensibilities of females greatly outraged. The remedy for such a condition of affairs is so patent and obvious that it seems like presumption to suggest it; the evils should be remedied and the abuses cured by putting more cars on this division during the busy hours of presentment also calls attention to the

The presentment also calls attention to the fact that the company fails to keep its agreement to keep the streets on either side of the tracks in good condition. The Grand Jury cannot comprehend why such a condition of affairs should be allowed to exist by the municipalities through which the road runs. Shelter and waiting rooms are recommended for the different transfer stations. The presentment concludes: "That the evils exist is palpable, that they are remediable by the grand inquest is doubtful, that the Legislature of the State can and should furnish a remedy is most doubt, that they will do so must be the desire of every lover of progress. The second presentment severely criticised the Common Council of the township of Union," it said, "have been derelict in their duty in many respects in their proceedings in reference to the improvements on Twenty-third street in said township. They have allowed the work thereon to progress without taking the proper bonds from the contractor to whom the said contract was awarded; the inspector appointed has been an inspector in name merely without any knowledge as to his duty in that respect. The work already done has not been done in accordance with the contract and specifications, and the whole of said township have been irregular, ill-advised, and improper, so much so that the Grand Jury feels it its duty to call attention to it. Further, it is admitted that the engineer authorized the payment of $3.73 to the contract, but the it is admitted that the engineer authorized the payment of $373 to the contractor, but the Council, in defiance of this fact, gave an order authorizing the certificate in the payment of $573 to the contractor without any satisfactory evidence that work to that amount had been done."

The third presentment called attention to the cow stables in North Bergen, where cows are fed on swill and the stables are kept in a filtry condition, and recommended that steps be taken to abate the nuisance.

ACCUSED OF BEATING A BOY. How Old Man Alignier Chastised Little Eddte Hertell.

A week ago 10-year-old Edward Hertell of 32 Chornton street, Williamsburgh, pulled down from a rack in front of Blasiur Allgaler's shoe store at 714 Broadway a pair of shoes and ran away. He was captured by Allgaler's son and handed over to the elder Allgaler. The shoe dealer, who is nearly 70 years old, struck the boy several times and also knocked him down. It is alleged that he then kicked Hertell and threw him out of the store. The boy was found insensible on the sidewalk by two men, who carried him to a drug store. An ambulance was summoned and after the boy's head had been bandaged Allgaier's son had him arrested for attempting to steal the shoes. MISS LYONS SAYS SHE CAN CARE FOR HERSELF.

re Is 87 Years Old and a Cheerful Philosopher Has Talked With God and Nome Devils-Foolishness and Wickeds ness of Men-Has' a $60,000 Estate, Miss Frances Lyons, a nimble bright-eved maiden lady, who astounded all who heard her when she gave her age as 87 years, appeared in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn yesterday in proceedings taken for the appointment of a committee of her person and estate. Miss Lyons used to live in Peekskill, in the old Lyons homestead. About a year ago her brother died, leaving considerable property, and John Vermilyea was appointed an executor of his estate.

Miss Lyons was not satisfied with Vermilyea's management of her affairs, so she put things in the hands of Lawyer Smith Williamson. The proceedings to have a committee of her person and estate appointed were instituted, and Mr. Williamson had Miss Lyons come down to court vesterday for examination. The first question asked Miss Lyons after she took the witness stand was whether she had ever had any trouble with her head. "Yes, I have," she replied. "Since my brother died they have all crowded about me. If I

"Oh, I don't know what I told the doctors," replied Miss Lyons. "They talked a lot of foldered stuff to me. I don't know what it all was, and I'm sure it don't bother me any."

"Well," asked the lawyer, "Have you ever talked with devis."

Asked what month it was, Miss Lyons replied that it was "Blustering March," and in response to a question as to whether she could count money, she replied that she could whenever she was able to get any.

In reply to a question as to how much she was worth, Miss Lyons said about $10,000.

"They want to put a guardian over me, but I have always managed to take care of my own affairs."

"Will?" replied Miss Lyons. "Why, my brother hadn't been dead a week before old Coffin wanted me to make a will. He said he'd help me, but I told him it was my will, and I guessed I knew how to handle it best."

Miss Lyons admitted that she was not an educated woman, and said that if she could read and write she'd make it good and lively for some folks.

In answer to Lawyer Williamson, Miss Lyons said she was a member of the old South Methodist Church at Peekskill.

AT LAW ABOUT A SHAMROCK. Two Germans Squabbling Over the Emblem

Judge Wheeler will hear in the United States Sircuit Court here to-day arguments on a patent for making artificial shamrocks. In 1891 Henry F. G. Fuchs of Jersey City invented and patented a shamrock badge "for lapel orna nent and other suitable forms of ornamenta-There are a quarter of a million people in this city of Irish birth and descent, and they took kindly to Mr. Fuchs's device and bought it by the thousand gross. This highly respectable Jersey City German-American, indeed, was in a fair way of getting rich on his Irish-American fellow citizens when one James Wilson of Fifth street, New York, recognizing a good thing when he saw it, began to make the shamrocks himself. This is set out in due form by Mr. Fuchs's lawyer, James M. Ball of 111 Broadway, and is in turn denied with great circumstantiality by Mr. Wilson's lawyer, Alfred E. way, and is in turn denied with great circumstantiality by Mr. Wilson's lawyer, Alfred E. Smith, Jr. Testimony has been taken at great length before United States Commissioner Shields, and the history and literature of the shamrock has been gone into profoundly.

The expert evidence as to just exactly what a shamrock is has been extraordinarily diverse. Mr. Fuchs's specifications allege that his patent shamrock is 'a green silk three-leaved hower with woven wire edge.' Webster's dictionary says the shamrock is 'white clover.' Of the emicent Irishmen subportated for the plaintiff the views are astounding and various.

Some of them have been expressed in writing and others orally. The Hon. Richard Croker, whose office is in the same building with Counsellor Hall's, smiled grimly when interrogated as to what a shamrock was, and replied: 'it's Ireland's national flower, and dear to all her sons wherever they are every day in the year-but especially on St. Patrick's day.'

The Hon. John C. Sheehan declared that he was not prepared to admit that as good shamrocks grow in America as in Erin, although many persons claim that they cannot distinguish between the white-flowering three-leaf clover of the United States and the original oid Patrick-pure "seamrog" of the green isle. "One thing is certain," said he, "an Irishman in America is as good as an Irishman in Erin, and sometimes better."

Ex-Mayor Schleren of Brooklyn delivered a lecture on "What I Learned About Brooklyn in the Mayor's Chair" last night before the Ali Soul's Club, in Williamsburgh. He said in

The Mayor should devote his entire time and thought to the affairs of the city; in fact, and thought to the affairs of the city; in fact, he can hardly do anything else. Brooklyn has grown to such immense proportions that it occupies the attention of his entire time. The Mayor should be thoroughly independent in his action, keep aloof as much as possible from participating in active politics. His term of office for a large city like Brooklyn should be changed to four years, but not be eligible to succeed himself. This would place him in a more independent position before the people. "It is almost impossible to find persons in the ordinary walks of active life who are not suffering, more or less, from want of vital force."

It was a learned professor connected with a New York medical college, who recently made this remark: "Men break down under the strains of high pressure living," he continued, "they overwork the brain and neglect the body. They exercise no part of the body except the head, and consequently suffer from indigestion, palpitation of the heat, weak nerves, and other list that make life a burden."

That the above words are absolutely true is repeatedly proved by the experience of many men who break down through everwork and too close attention to business. They overtax the nervous system, they strain their physical powers to the point of exhaustion, and then have to give up the fight. This was exactly what happened in the case of Selden Fish, the well-known chicago lawyer, as will be seen by the following statement that he recently made." I was not diseased," said Mr. Fish, "but simply prostrated at my nerve centres by too close application to business. By the use of Fluffy's nure malt whisker, howaver, I was completely restored to heait. I think thut this whiskey is nature's great medy for almost any weakening or wasting disease.

Thousands of people have bassed through the same experience. When broken down and worn out in health, they have discovered that the only way to regain their lost vigor is by the use of a pure stimulant. They have found out that the best thing for this purpose is furfix's pure mait whiskey, which is unexcelled for its great restorative powers. No other preparation can be relied on to work its wonderful curative effects. SETBACK FOR UHLMAN

Justice Gaynor Enjoins the Two Cities from Busing His Bridge Francistse,

Justice Gaynor of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn has granted an injunction restraining the cities of New York and Brooklyn from pur-chasing the Uhlman franchise, granted by the Legislature of 1892, for the construction of a new East River bridge. The Commissioners for the new bridge agreed to give the Unimas Company $200,000 for the franchise, and also screed that the elevated roads should have the privilege of crossing the structure.

Justice Gaynor discusses at much length the history of the negotiations between the Commissioners and the Uniman Company, and takes strong ground against the proposed purchase. He says in part:
"The present case exhibits only another way

"The present case exhibits only another way of getting unearned money out of the public by means of public franchises. It presents the all too common instance of government giving away a variable franchise, the property of all the people, with one hand, and buying it back out of the people's money with the other hand. Such an order of things is not government for the weal of all, but a form of socialism for the benefit of a few at the expense of the many, from which far more is to be feared to the permanency of government than from the perverse few who profess, or are said to profess, opposition to all government. few who profess, or are said to profess, opposi-tion to all government.

It all comes to this, viz.: That whereas those in control of the bridge company obtained from the Legislature a franchise to build a bridge distending chiefly to make it a railroad bridge on account of their control of clevated railroads, they are now by this agreement to be paid $200,000 of the public funds for not build-ing the bridge, and, in addition, after a bridge shall be built out of the public funds, they are to be given the exclusive use of the space upon it for elevated railroad tracks. They build no bridge, but they are to have a railroad bridge worth many millions, and also $200,000 at the public expense. To say that this total considera-tion, amounts to twenty millions of dollars by a greater responsibility than that or a single Judge."

Judge."

Justice Gayner says in conclusion:

"Let an injunction be granted to continue until the trial of the action, or until the agreement of purchase be modified, so that the purchase price will be for the franchise of the Williamsburgh Bridge only, and by striking out the claim that the said clause is nugatory, and binds no one, will, of course, insure the striking out or that clause at once, for any opposition would be inconsistent with the good faith of such claim.

Edward Lauterbach, counsel for the Bridge Commission, said:
"As I understand the decision the fatal clauses in the contract are capable of a double construction, and there will be no difficulty in changing them to suit the court. There is nothing in the contract that slipulates that the clevated roads should run over the new bridge, only that approaches should be built at such grades as would make this possible.
